Two groups ask Kennedy for Appalachian power plan

The American Public Power Association and the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association have asked President Kennedy for an Eastern Kentucky-Appalachian Area development program similar to the TVA.

Commenting that "the area has little hope for the future," officials of the two organizations told the President that a new TVA-type authority could use electric power to "lift the economy of nine Appalachian states."

The request was made in a conference at the White House Sept. 23 between the President, officers of the associations, and Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall and Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman.

The following is the text of the presentation to Mr. Kennedy:

The Appalachian region is a chronically depressed area where unemployment runs as high as 30%. With the mechanization of the coal industry and with rapid depletion, due to mismanagement and exploitation, of the forest and soil resources, unemployment continues to grow, economic conditions continue to decline, and the area has little hope for the future.

Appalachia suffers from all the ills inherent in a depressed Area:

inadequate educational facilities—resulting in poorly trained students and high drop out rates; untrained or unskilled workforce; poor hospitals and medical care; declining tax bases; and costly social welfare programs.

We urge a bold and dynamic program for the area, similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority. The requisite resources exist in vast quantities: coal for huge, mine-mouth thermal operations and water for hydroelectric generation and steam cooling purposes. In addition, the area abounds in good sites for pump-storage hydroelectric projects to complement the vast potential for coal-fired base-load generation stations. A beginning could be the 480,000 kw Devils Jumps project in eastern Kentucky—where 8 area redevelopment councils recently called for creation by Congress of a new TVA type authority, using electric power to life the economy of nine Appalachian states.

New transmission technology and mine-mouth generation will permit service to big city loads hundreds of miles away, as well as providing low-cost energy for establishment of new local industries. Projects to control water for cooling purposes, to provide badly needed flood control—and to be paid for by the hydroelectricity generation—would be an integral part of a massive power development.

The recreational potential of reservoir projects is tremendous. Throughout the nation, more than half of the people visiting Federal recreational facilities visit reservoir sites, many of which are much farther from population centers than is the Appalachian area, which sits on the back step of the largest concentration of people in the United States. In fact, more people use the recreation facilities at Federal multi-purpose projects than visit national parks and national forests combined.

We therefore respectfully suggest the following program for Appalachia:

(1) Detailed study of (a) the resource development potential with especial attention given coal and water for use in generation of power and development of recreation; (b) potential markets for power and the transmission to those markets; and (c) human resources and their related facilities which badly need updating for the integration into any development plan.

(2) Creation of a Federal regional organization to carry out a resources development program.

County accepts courthouse bids

Demolition of the Letcher County Courthouse should begin sometime before Nov. 1, and the new courthouse should be ready for occupancy by Nov. 1 of next year.

Letcher Fiscal Court this week awarded a contract for removal of the old building and construction of the new one to Ramsey & Clubb Construction Co. of Shelbyville. The firm bid $535,865, which was about $45,000 more than the money the county has available.

Fiscal court voted to accept the bid and agreed that it will find the extra money if federal agencies involved do not permit it to change plans to eliminate some expenses.

County Judge James M. Caudill said the plans could be revised to eliminate air conditioning from all offices but the circuit courtroom and county courtroom and to eliminate $17,500 worth of fixtures planned for the Letcher County Public Library, which will occupy quarters on the ground floor of the new building.

Judge Caudill said the contractors have agreed to hire all local labor possible.

County offices will be moved to temporary quarters while the construction is in progress. Judge Caudill said the sheriff's office will be moved to the Cook building above The Mountain Eagle. County Court Clerk Charlie Wright will have his office in the basement at Letcher Lanes, and Caudill's office also will be there if there is room. County Attorney Stanley Hogg will use his private law office. Sessions of circuit and county court will be held at City Hall.

Money for the new courthouse will come from a $351,000 grant from the Accelerated Public Works program of the federal government and from a $191,000 loan to the county from the Community Facilities Administration. The loan is to be repaid by rent to be paid by various agencies.

Of the total money available, about $36,000 is to be spent for architects' fees and about $7,000 for legal fees, County Attorney Stanley Hogg explained. Other miscellaneous expenses put the total available for construction at about $490,000.

Hogg said the county hopes to hear by Friday whether the federal government will approve acceptance of the bid.

STUART ROBINSON PURCHASE TALKED

The Letcher County Board of Education is considering purchase of the old Stuart Robinson School property at Blackey.

The principal use would be for a gymnasium for Letcher School. Supt. Sanford Adams said seventh and eighth grade classes also might be moved from Letcher into the Stuart Robinson buildings to relieve overcrowding there.

Adams said the Presbyterian Church, which owns the property, has put a price of $125,000 on it but has asked the board to make an offer.

State Department of Education officials were here this week to inspect the property but did not reach a decision as to whether the purchase should be approved.

The school board has not formally considered the purchase.

Hospitals change hands

Whitesburg Memorial Hospital, built eight years ago by the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund, this week became a part of Appalachian Regional Hospitals, Inc.

ARH is a non-profit corporation set up under sponsorship of the United Presbyterian Church Board of National Missions to operate the Whitesburg hospital and four others in the 10-unit UMW chain after the union said it would have to sell them or close them.

The other five hospitals will become a part of ARH next July.

Ray Allen, administrator of the hospital here, said several policy changes have been made at the institution.

Among them:

1. The hospital will itemize bills to patients instead of making a flat all-inclusive rate.

Allen said there will be two room rates. Multiple (or ward) rooms will be $16.50 a day and private rooms will be $21 a day. The room rate will include room and board, nursing care, administrative services and certain routine drugs. Other charges will be added for other hospital services.

2. Physicians formerly associated with the hospital are now a part of a private medical group and will be employed by the patient, not by the hospital.

3. A doctor will not be on duty at the hospital at all times.

Allen said the following physicians and dentists are now members of the hospital staff. That is, they are permitted to admit their patients and treat them there. He listed them as:

Dr. R. D. Collins, Dr. James M. Fraser, Dr. Lee Moore, Dr. Ernest E. Musgrave, Dr. Arthur J. Nash, Dr. Jim B. Tolliver, Dr. T. M. Perry, Dr. Sam W. Quillen, Dr. Benjamin W. Clark, Dr. Robert S. Bain, Dr. Lundy Adams, Dr. Clayton J. Bennett Jr. and Dr. Harold A. Cohen.

The last five were practicing in the hospital under the UMW administration.

Allen said the hospital had reduced its staff by about 20 per cent, partly through resignation and partly through dismissals.

Allen said the hospital wanted miners and their families to know they were welcome as patients.

Members of the board of trustees of ARH met last Thursday at Harlan and adopted several operating policies for the hospitals.

Appointments to the medical staffs will be on an interim basis until July 1, 1964. Beginning then, appointments will be reviewed annually and will be for a period of a year.

After Oct. 15 local medical staff organizations will be set up by physicians on the hospital staffs to supervise and develop services and patient care.

The doctors who are now renting office space within the hospitals will move to offices outside the hospital as soon as space can be rented or built.

The board said it invited inquiries and participation by all physicians in use of existing office space at the hospitals and in a program for developing office space in separate buildings.

The hospitals will continue to provide emergency services and give in-patient care to indigent persons.

Official headquarters of ARH is to be located at Lexington, Ky. Names of the hospitals were changed. The hospital here is now Whitesburg Appalachian Regional Hospital.

Mrs. Harry M. Caudill of Whitesburg is a member of the board of trustees of ARH.

Women to meet

A meeting of Letcher County Republican women will be held Saturday at 2 p. m. at City Hall in Whitesburg for the purpose of electing officers for a membership club in the National Federation of Republican Women.

Lynch takes Jenkins

Lynch got definite revenge on the Jenkins Cavaliers this week end 27-6.

But the fans thought they were going to see a different story when Jenkins made its first touchdown in the first few seconds of the game.

Jenkins kicked off to the Bulldogs and from the first play of scrimmage Lynch fumbled and Haskew recovered on the two-yard line. The Cavaliers scored with Collins driving through the line. This was the last time Jenkins even threatened to score.

Flannery was the big terror that haunted Jenkins on offense as well as defense. The big fullback was running touchdown as well as getting tackles.

Greer had a good night for one quarter but his nightmares were long and fierce the last three quarters.

The Cavaliers could not get their ground game moving so they went to the air. But nothing was kind to them. Greer was caught many times while he was trying to throw to his usually reliable receivers. The receivers could not get open and the Jenkins defense faltered up the middle.

Every team has its bad games, and Cavalier fans hope their team has had its last.

Judge dies

Funeral services for Matthew C. Fields, 74, Whitesburg police judge for the past 10 years, were conducted Sept. 27 at the chapel of Moore and Craft Funeral Home.

The Rev. Charles Carter and Elders Ray Collins and I. D. Back officiated.

Judge Fields died Sept. 25 at the Jenkins Clinic Hospital after a long illness.

He was a native of Whitesburg and had been a school teacher.

He was a son of Ira and Martha Raleigh Fields.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Allie Frazier Fields; two daughters, Mrs. June Henry, Newport News, Va., and Mrs. Mafra Jones of Louisville; a son, Raleigh Fields, Whitesburg; two brothers, I. W. Fields, Louisville, and Howard M. Fields, Jacksboro, Tenn.; three sisters, Mrs. Rachel F. Adams, Whitesburg; Mrs. Alie F. Lewis, Whitesburg; and Mrs. Polly F. Dr. Klicka appointed

Dr. Karl S. Klicka, executive director of the Hospital Planning Council of Metropolitan Chicago since 1959, has been named executive director of Appalachian Regional Hospitals Inc.

He was elected by the regional hospital board of directors at a meeting in Harlan last Thursday.

He will take over his new duties on Dec. 1.

Appalachian Regional Hospitals Inc. Tuesday took over control of five hospitals built in 1955 by the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund. They include the hospital at Whitesburg as well as those at Harlan, Hazard, Middlesboro and McDowell. The other hospitals in the 10-hospital chain built by the UMW will be transferred to Appalachian Regional Hospitals Inc. July 1, 1964.

Dr. Klicka will live in Lexington, where the main offices of Appalachian Regional Hospitals Inc. will be located. His pri-

YELLOWJACKETS WIN

The Whitesburg Yellowjackets swamped the Navajos of M. C. Napier 34-6 at Hazard Friday night.

A 30-yard run by halfback Ronnie Day and a 20-yard pass from Steve Frazier to Mike Adams let the Jackets score minutes after they received the opening kick. The try for extra point was good, and Whitesburg was ahead 7-0. Napier got its lone touchdown in the second quarter, as Mickey Joe Fields passed to Bobby Fugate for 57 yards and a first down on the Whitesburg 25-yard line.

This week end the Jackets will meet the Jenkins Cavaliers, favored to win the Eastern Kentucky Mountain Conference.

Hospital problems are here—not in Lexington

The United Presbyterian Church is in the middle of a collection of blunders which threatens the future existence of the Miners Memorial Hospitals in Eastern Kentucky as surely as they were threatened by the initial decision of the United Mine Workers of America to sell them or close them down.

The Presbyterians have tried to create a myth to the effect that the hospitals are, or will be, community hospitals operated by local citizens for the benefit of local residents. Nothing, it appears, is farther from the truth.

The hospitals, it now is clear, will be controlled by outsiders, run by outsiders, from an office located outside the mountains, for the benefit and greater glory of we know not whom—but certainly not for the best interest of Eastern Kentucky and its chronic and ever-increasing medical needs.

If present policies are continued, the hospitals face nothing but failure and eventual closing within a year or so, after some months of prolonged death agonies intensified by the obvious inability of the Presbyterians to diagnose either the cause or the cure.

The greatest blunder of all is the decision to hire an outsider as administrator with no demonstrated knowledge of or concern about Eastern Kentucky and its problems. To compound this error, the Presbyterians have decided to locate their administrative offices not in Eastern Kentucky where the hospitals and the problems are, but in Lexington, Ky., where the collective knowledge and concern about Eastern Kentucky just about equals that of Lexington, Massachusetts.

If there is one chronic, never changing problem confronting Eastern Kentucky in all aspects of life it is that for generations the business, governmental, intellectual, cultural, social, educational, industrial and medical leadership has always been located out of the area itself—in such far-distant points as Lexington, Louisville, Pittsburgh and New York—draining away our resources but never putting anything back, and denying us locally the area's just share of true leadership.

If the Presbyterians seriously are interested in Eastern Kentucky, then they will locate the administrative offices for the institutions in Eastern Kentucky where the institutions and the problems are. And if the recently hired administrator and other new personnel are unwilling to live in Eastern Kentucky—to live with the problems—then their resignations should be accepted immediately. Let them go back to where they came from.

We have been close observers of the hospitals and their problems for the past several years and have been convinced of one central fact. Many, if not most, of the ills confronting the hospitals would never have occurred in the first place—or would have been cleared up almost immediately—except for the fact that the UMW maintained its top administrative offices for the hospitals in Washington, D. C., and those Washington administrators failed completely in understanding problems as they arose. We are of the opinion, in fact, that the hospitals could have continued under general UMW sponsorship and could have met with full local support and acceptance had it not been for the great gulf in distance and understanding that separated Whitesburg from Washington. The same separation will exist between Whitesburg, Harlan, McDowell, Hazard, Middlesboro on the one hand, and Lexington and the New York Presbyterian offices on the other, and the end result is all too clear—total failure.

Operating long distance from New York, the Presbyterians already have blundered to the extent that the hospitals already have lost many of their best, most experienced, most competent personnel. Laboratory technicians of outstanding ability, nurses, doctors, surgeons, etc., all have been leaving one by one as they have found jobs in other hospitals—because nowhere along the line have the Presbyterians bothered to tell the just plain ordinary talented citizen who has been working at the hospitals the past several years that his services would or would not be needed.

Months of totally unnecessary uncertainty, a time in which the typical employee knew not whether his services would be desired by the Presbyterians, have totally demoralized staffs. This has resulted in back-biting, throat-cutting suspicion and distrust among some staff members—all too frequently quite obvious to the hospitalized patient. In turn, the lack of confidence among staff members concerning the Presbyterians and their intentions has rubbed off onto the typical patient and much of the general public, so that public confidence in the institutions has been lost to an alarming degree.

The first and most vital job facing the Presbyterians is to restore this confidence among both staff and patients. It cannot be done in Lexington where the hospitals are not, but must be done here in Eastern Kentucky where the problems are.

Indeed, if the Presbyterians think so highly of Lexington as a medical center that they must locate their own center of activity there, why should they expect Eastern Kentuckians to look to the Presbyterians here for medical service? Why should Eastern Kentuckians not continue going to Lexington when they are in need of skilled medical service, as they have through time-honored precedent?

Why should we be expected to perpetuate the myth that the hospitals under Presbyterian jurisdiction will be community hospitals, when they are to be controlled out of New York and Lexington, with local citizens denied a voice in their conduct? Why go along with the myth that the institutions are not Presbyterian institutions when no one other than a few top church officials in New York has any real voice in policy decisions to date?

Why sit idly by as this so-called "community effort" forces the closing of the Catholic-operated Sharon Heights Hospital in Jenkins, and threatens the Catholic Mount Mary hospital in Hazard?

If the Presbyterians are unwilling to move their offices into Eastern Kentucky, to convert the hospitals into true community institutions without sham, then they should withdraw from the project immediately before the hospitals as potential community service institutions are damaged beyond repair.

Eastern Kentucky needs far more as an area in the way of true locally based medical service than the Presbyterians appear ready to produce. Yet they have taken unto themselves the role of fulfilling these area medical needs, and by so doing have denied the area the potential of other solutions. By agreeing to accept a role and a responsibility, and then by failing to fulfill that role, the Presbyterians, whatever their intentions, are creating a situation that may well be catastrophic.

Welcome help

The case for public power and an Eastern Kentucky-Appalachian area development similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority gained welcome support recently from two highly-important organizations—the American Public Power Association and the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association.

Officers of these organizations met with President Kennedy, Secretary of the Interior Stuart Udall and Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman at the White House on Sept. 23. They outlined to the President some of the basic power problems and needs in the nation, and also made a special plea for development in our mountain area.

The two organizations include in their memberships many men with long, distinguished records in the field of power and its production and distribution. When they speak, they speak with the voice of knowledge, and what they have to say deserves the serious consideration of every resident of Eastern Kentucky. These organizations know what power is. They know what it has done in other sections of the country to lift blighted economies through creation of new recreation- and industry-based jobs. The Mountain Eagle carries the text of their presentation to President Kennedy in a news story on Page One. We urge you to read it.

Eastern Kentucky's chief and we believe only hope for true and permanent development is in the field of public power and the harnessing of our coal mines to power plants for the production of electricity to be shipped by wire to markets elsewhere.

An overdue change

Word that Uncle Sam will make a special grant of funds to help build a 9-mile section of the Mountain Parkway between Campton and Van Cleve is about the most welcome news that Eastern Kentucky has had the past few years.

Construction of the section, tying in with work already done from Jackson to Van Cleve, would complete the road from Winchester to Jackson, thus bring closer the day when the Whitesburg-to-Jackson section will be built.

Perhaps the most important aspect of the announcement, however, is the shift it represents in federal thinking from dreams to something more like realism in the matter of helping Eastern Kentucky and other underdeveloped areas. The Area Redevelopment Administration and the Public Works Program have doled out hundreds of millions of dollars during the past two years with little or no permanent effect in Eastern Kentucky, West Virginia and similar areas. At last, ARA has approved a project with genuine merit.

One of the great ironies of recent times has been the fact that federal officials and agencies by the dozen have been telling Eastern Kentucky that it could never have true progress, could never become an industrial area, without new roads. But while preaching the need for roads in one breath, they have consistently turned down pleas for roads and road money with the next. (The same is true of dams and flood control. We are told we must have dams, but where are they?) It has all smacked of phoney baloney, to such an extent that Kentucky may well elect a Republican governor this year out of sheer disgust with the Democrats.

But if at long last the ARA and other members of the Washington alphabet have decided to do something about road conditions in Eastern Kentucky—if the Mountain Parkway is the needed miracle they all tell us it is—why build only a 9-mile section between Jackson and Campton? Why not spend some of the hundreds of millions frittered away on other projects and complete the road all the way to Whitesburg, and indeed, all the way to the Atlantic coast? Or is the ARA afraid that too much progress, too much road building, might put that agency out of business?

It is long past time for President Kennedy to take official cognizance of the ARA and its total failure to date in Eastern Kentucky. If the program is to be worth two cents to the area, it must undergo a complete shift in viewpoint and, we believe, administrative personnel starting at the top. To the extent that the granting of meager funds for limited work on the Mountain Parkway represents a change in ARA thinking it is welcome. But much more drastic changes are in order and long past due.

Incidentally, Kentucky State Highway Commissioner Henry Ward undoubtedly had much to do with the fact ARA is at long last spending some money on roads in Eastern Kentucky, since Ward has been debating the point at every opportunity for a long time. It is too bad ARA is not administered by a man of Ward's caliber.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

No more briefcases

To the Editor:

I suppose that something like two or three gallons of printer's ink must have been wasted recently in idealistic blubbering over the condition of the mountain people of Southeastern Kentucky. I found it mostly amusing at first, but of late there's been a putrid odor about the whole shabby business.

For some twenty years, I went through the disturbing experience of watching too many of my Letcher County neighbors go steadily downhill; from hard-working, proud and upright mountaineers to whining, crawling poor white trash groveling for government hand-outs. I've been gone now for about 16 years, and the news from back home gets worse every week. The crowning degradation has been my former neighbors' abject willingness to let two-bit politicians and double-dealing "businessmen" do their sniveling and whining for them.

They have been so thoroughly browbeaten and contaminated with welfare state spinelessness that they can't even get up the guts to wheedle their own hand-outs.

As a former Letcher Countian with more than a passing interest in the subject, I now propose the only sensible solution to the problem, and request that all previous propounders of salvation-theories retire at once.

First of all, let the state declare the area off-limits to welfare workers, government investigating teams and flat-land hand-wringers.

Secondly, run a series of buses and trains out, carrying all those with permanently outstretched palms to such places as Lexington, Louisville, and the District of Columbia, where they can be slopped with the rest of the hogs.

Thirdly, blow up the bridges, barricade the highways and direct all air traffic around the area. Post border guards with strict orders to admit no one totting a briefcase.

I am firmly convinced that those who elect to stay will have the grit to grab a grub-hoe, dig in, and remain self-respecting free men. They may not patronize the stores much, and they may have a tendency to take potshots at poke-nose politicians, but they'll be men and women of the caliber who settled this country in the first place. Let the Whitesburg and Hazard "business executives" take to peddling pots and pans and make an honest living for a change, run the pea-head politicians off to the Pennyrile, and even a rank deserter such as I will come back home—to be proud of my neighbors again.

Linefork road

To the editor:

This is the first time I have ever written a letter to the editor, but this is the first time I have ever had much to be mad about.

If the good people of Letcher County will remember, the roads in the rural parts of Letcher County became almost impassable last winter because the county failed to repair them. Even though the state sent more than $200,000 to the county the money was spent so foolishly that by spring of this year people all over the county were calling Judge Caudill "Chug Hole Jim." However, during the summer Judge Caudill has been able to do something for the people. He went to Frankfort and got the Highway Department to blacktop a little piece of road on Line Fork. This is undoubtedly the most outrageous road project ever undertaken in Ken-

Why a new name?

In one of the most ill-advised actions imaginable, the Presbyterians have changed the name of the Miners Memorial Hospitals in Eastern Kentucky. What was called Whitesburg Memorial Hospital has been renamed "Whitesburg Appalachian Regional Hospital." Similar name changes have been put into effect for the other Miners Hospitals.

Had the Presbyterians chosen to deliver a slap in the face to every coal miner, every miner's widow or orphan in Eastern Kentucky, they could not have chosen a better way. For the hospitals were built as a memorial to the countless thousands of coal miners who had been killed or maimed in mining accidents throughout the coal region. The hospitals were built out of the blood of these men.

The name change rather obviously is an effort to erase any possible connection between the hospitals and the word "union" or the word "miner." Yet, had it not been for the union and the miner the hospitals would never have been built.

Is the hospital in effect inviting coal miners to stay away? Whatever the Presbyterian intention, this is the obvious conclusion.

Coal mining and the construction of the hospitals are a part of the history of Eastern Kentucky, and the hospitals the most magnificent response by a union to the needs of an area ever seen in this nation. How little, how childish, it is of the Presbyterians to be a part of an effort to erase this proud chapter in Eastern Kentucky's past.

The hospitals are and must ever be a memorial to the coal miner who laid down his life in the pits of darkness beneath our hills. Anything else is unthinkable.

STATE ANNOUNCES 35-DAY DUCK HUNTING SEASON WITH INCREASED BAG LIMIT TO OPEN DECEMBER 1

FRANKFORT--A 35-day duck-hunting season with a bag limit increase has been announced for Kentucky by Minor Clark, commissioner of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, and the U. S. Department of Interior. The goose season remains practically unchanged from last year. The duck season will open at noon on December 1 and continue after that day with sunrise to sunset hunting through January 4, giving Kentuckians 35 days of hunting. The bag limit this year is four ducks, which may include one hooded merganser; two wood ducks or two mallard or black ducks, singly or in aggregate of both kinds. The possession limit, after two or more days of hunting, is 8 and may include two hooded mergansers; two wood ducks, four mallard or black ducks, singly or in the aggregate of both kinds. For Ballard Wildlife Management Area, the season is set for the same dates, but since there is no afternoon hunting on this area, duck shooting may not begin there until December 2. The statewide bag and possession limits apply.

The goose season will open on November 7 and continue through January 15, giving a 70-day season. For the Ballard County Management Area, the season opens on December 1 and continues through January 15, excluding Sundays and Christmas Day. The bag and possession limit for geese is five, which may not include more than two Canadas or their subspecies; two whitefronted geese, or one Canada goose or subspecies and one whitefronted

California grapes are among the plentiful foods right now. If you want the ripest sweetest seedless white grapes, choose bunches in which the color has turned to white rather than bright green, and the individual grapes tend to be long rather than round.

NATURE WITH HER MAGIC WAND SEEMS TO BE TRYING TO PLEASE EVERYBODY THIS FALL

By MABEL KISER

Mother Nature has waved her magic wand over our hills, and her magic colors are beginning to appear. She seems to be trying to please everyone this autumn. We have had several frosts but the weed seeds still are not killed. My flowers are still holding up their heads but are beginning to look a little wan, as if they know death is near.

We welcome some new neighbors to Millstone. Besides the Leonard Bentleys, who moved in last week, we have Walter Tolson, who purchased the Kenny Newsome home, and Hebert Tolson, who bought the home owned by Bill Collins, the former home of Hayden Wilson.

Miss Martha Jane Potter has given the county school board an option on her property at Kona as a site for a new consolidated school to be built in the near future.

Miss Martha Jane Potter entertained some friends and relatives at her home at Kona over the week end. There were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Caudill of Hazard, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Lewis of Whitesburg, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Holbrook of Millstone and E. C. Potter of Kona.

They all attended church Sunday morning, then went back and had dinner and visited all afternoon.

Robert Picklesimer of Berea was calling on the J. S. Holbrooks Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Edna Newsome Taylor and Mrs. Joanne Reynolds have just returned from a visit to New York City. Mrs. Reynolds, a nurse, attended the annual American Hospital Association meeting and a meeting of the American Association of Anesthetists. They went by plane from Bristol. They enjoyed their trip very much and got to do some sightseeing. They saw the "Today" television show, visited Radio City Music Hall and saw the Rockettes, had dinner in Greenwich Village, took a boat ride about Manhattan, attended a performance of "Stop the World, I Want to Get Off" at the Shubert Theater, and visited the Empire State Building and the Statue of Liberty and many other places of interest.

My neighbor's granddaughter, Madonna Meade, daughter of the Jesse Meades, entertained some of her classmates at a slumber party Friday night in honor of her birthday.

Hollis Reynolds of Louisville has been visiting his parents, the Earnest Reynolds. They all went to the home of Mrs. Reynolds' brother, Jody P. Adams, Colly, and purchased some country sorghum.

Mr. and Mrs. Cotton Hoskins drove to Bristol over the week end and visited Mrs. Hoskins' sister, Mrs. Robert Trail (Alphie). They all enjoyed breakfast at Holston Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Brush of Pennsylvania and their son, Timmy, have been visiting his sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Kiser. Also a visitor in the Kiser home was their son, Sammy, a student from Lees Junior College.

The children of the Jesse Meades enjoyed so much having grandma, Mrs. Ballard Meade, as overnight guest Saturday. Mrs. Meade, young in heart, enjoys being with her grandchildren and always joins in their games. They have wonderful times together.

We are happy to report Mrs. Archie Craft of Springfield, Ohio, back to work after being very ill for a while.

Nathan Wright of Haymond is very ill.

Among the folks from Letcher to attend the Union Association meeting in Florida were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Brown, (Leah) and Mrs.

Polly Wright Bentley, Blair Branch. Calling on Sol and Eunice Meade Sunday were a nephew and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Ben (Junior) Taylor.

Mrs. J. S. Holbrook attended the Ladies Sewing Club this week at the home of Mrs. Maurice Lewis in Whitesburg. Mrs. Lewis' daughter, Anne, entertained them by showing some slides of her recent trip to Europe.

John Vent Bentley drove to Ohio this week to take Miles Taylor and his family home after a visit with his father, the Lilburn Taylors. Mrs. John Vent Bentley visited her parents while John Vent was gone.

Calling on the Otho Bentleys Sunday afternoon were his daughter and her family, Judge and Mrs. James M. Caudill and Anna Laura. They all enjoyed some home made ice cream.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hampton took their young daughter Felicia to Lexington this week. She will enter the St. Joseph Hospital. Grandma and Grandpa Bennie Franklin will keep little brother Paul.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Day of Whitco have purchased a new home, the home formerly owned by Cuba Winston Frazier in Whitco. Teddy Bentley of Indianapolis came in this week and got his mother, Mrs. W. D. Bentley, and took her back to Indianapolis. She will keep house for him and his school-age son, Dirk, while his wife, Claudette, attends beauty school in New York to learn hair styling.

Ben David Blair, Somerset, and his daughter, Mrs. Lola Pigman, Whitesburg, were calling on his uncle, Ben Franklin, Friday evening.

Mrs. Ben Franklin has not been feeling too well for several days. Mrs. Otho Bentley and I enjoyed a visit with her Thursday evening. Mrs. Franklin is such good company. Despite the pain she must have she is always cheerful.

The Colson Parent-Teacher Organization met Thursday night for the first time this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Amburgey and family were visiting Kermit's father, Noah Amburgey, at Omaha Sunday.

Mr. Amburgey was fine and Aunt Nan Collins was much better after a sick spell. Miss Collins has rheumatism. Other visitors in the Amburgey home were Mr. and Mrs. Arlie Amburgey and children, Arville Amburgey and twin daughters Jenny and Judy. The twins were home from their work in Indiana.

The best bridge that we have ever had across Rockhouse Creek in the path that leads to the Collins family cemetery, has been in use for several months now.

The bridge is built from five metal culverts covered with concrete. The bridge, built by a truck mine owner across the creek, will not wash away. If Rockhouse Creek gets out of bounds, it will flow over the bridge.

Mrs. Rufus Holbrook and Mrs. Aubrey Nichols drove to Lexington this week. Mrs. Nichols took her son Mark to see a doctor and Mrs. Holbrook brought back her grandson, Gregory Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Brad Nease visited the family cemetery Friday. They visited the grave of John Nease and the old home place of Blesson Nease. They came away sad for the old home place had grown full of weeds and briars.

tucky. In some places the black-top is less than eight feet wide, and in some places it is nearly 20 feet wide. It has big bumps in it which are dangerous to travel over and one man called Cornett told me that he thought a bushel of campaign promises was buried under one of the bumps. The road is dangerous to drive over and deserves the title of the crookedest and narrowest black-topping job in the state. I am sure tourists would come to look at it if we would advertise it. At last Letcher County is first in something. We are the first county in Kentucky in having bad roads.

It looks like Judge Caudill is up to all his old tricks again. If you will go to the courthouse and check you will find that during his first administration the taxes on the big coal companies went way down and the taxes on the coal miners went way up. This year the taxes on Bethlehem Steel and United States Steel properties are down from what they were last year, but both of these companies are mining more coal than they did last year. In the meantime the land taxes of practically everybody else in Letcher County have gone up. The taxes on land that the coal companies destroy by stripmining is raised while the company that destroys the land pays less taxes. What kind of justice is this? One 80 year old farmer on Elk Creek had his taxes nearly doubled. Yet he received no notice of any raise until he received his tax bill in the mail. How many of you have found a big tax increase on your bill this year? No wonder all the big coal companies were for Judge Caudill when he ran for judge. Now you can see why so many people have started calling him "Tax Raising Jim." It is high time that the good people get together and insist on good government, good roads and fair taxes.

Very truly yours, more than 20 years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Arlin Caudill and their young daughter, Sheila Ruth. Unfortunately Mr. Caudill had been injured in a mine accident and was on crutches. Much water has gone under the bridge since we lived as neighbors, and much of it has been tears. Time had treated Mrs. Caudill well, and she looked fine and had aged so little. Mrs. Caudill tells me her children, Bobby Wayne, and Janice, babies when I knew them, had grown up and married. Janice married Rufus Fugate. (Son of the Bradley Fugates of Mayking) They have five children, the two older ones are in school; they live in Dayton. Bobby Wayne married a girl from Indiana, and they live there.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Bentley are building an addition to their home. The Bentleys moved from their large stone home into a smaller house they owned just across the street.

The Old Union Association of Regular Baptists was held this year in Green Cove Springs, Florida, near Jacksonville. Delegates from the Elizabeth Church were Ballard Meade, Fleming, and Elders Mander Yonts, Hazard, and Charlie Gibson, Red Fox. This was something new to the Florida people. The delegates reported a good meeting, and the Florida people treated them so nicely. They saw they never saw so much food. They hauled it in on trucks. The Association elected the same officers it had last year--Elder John Hess, Haysi, Va., moderator; Elder Willie Hendrick, Elkhorn City, assistant moderator; Elder John H. Mullins, Kingsport, Tenn., clerk, and Elder Bruce Mullins, Breaks, Va., assistant clerk.

Hamburger surprise

A tangy hamburger surprise center of chopped onions and Worcestershire sauce tempts everyone to ask for more. Make thin hamburger patties, using your family's favorite onion-laden recipe. Then put a spoonful of a chopped-onion and Worcestershire sauce mixture between two patties and pinch the edges together. Broil or pan fry about 15 minutes, turning once.

Fall is planting time for shrubs, trees in Kentucky

Fall, rather than spring, is the best time to plant most trees and shrubs in Kentucky, according to Earl H. New, University of Kentucky horticulture specialist.

The planting season starts in October and continues through most of November. With proper care, shrubs and trees can also be planted in December if the weather is mild and the ground remains unfrozen.

Most of these plants have soil balled around their roots during the early part of the planting season. However, plants which naturally lose their leaves may often be transplanted in the fall without soil on their roots.

How deep should the shrub or tree be planted? Dig the hole deep enough so the plant can be put in at about the same depth, or slightly deeper than it grew in the nursery.

The only fertilizer which should be mixed with the soil at this time is a small amount of superphosphate. How much superphosphate to use depends on the size of the plant. Generally, from about two tablespoonfuls for small plants on up to 8 to 10 tablespoonfuls for large shrubs--and about twice this much for large trees--is sufficient.

Do not place any other commercial fertilizer in the soil at this time, New warns. Fertilizers containing nitrogen and potash can be placed on top of the soil later. In the spring, just before growth starts, usually is the best time to add this fertilizer. However, small amounts can be applied to the soil surface a month after the plant has been set.

The newly set plant should be thoroughly firmed into the soil. A thorough soaking with water is one of the best ways to do this; soaking with water is even more effective than tamping down the soil with your feet.

Plants, such as trees, which have long stems, should have these stems staked to keep them from swinging in the winter wind. Swaying in the wind may loosen the plant in the soil.

Never allow newly set shrubs or trees to dry out, New concludes. Be prepared to water them thoroughly if natural rainfall does not keep them moist. This usually means a thorough soaking at least once a week if enough rain has not fallen to do the job for you. Under very dry conditions, watering as often as every four or five days may be necessary. However, too much water is just as bad as too little water; excess water can smother the roots and cause them to die.

ELKHORN BEATS FLEMING IN RAIN

The rain took a great toll in football Saturday night as Elkhorn City scored the lone touch down of the ballgame to beat Fleming-Neon 6-0.

The fans were wet, the field was one big mud hole, but both teams struggled for victory.

Passing was the only ground gaining weapon that either team had.

The Fleming Pirates moved the ball most of the night anytime they wanted to, except when hindered by fumbles. Also the defense looked good. But rain and adverse conditions can alter many a ball game.

Fleming-Neon kicked off to Elkhorn and held until they had to kick. The Pirates then moved the ball to the 40-yard line, and fumbled. Again the Pirate defense held.

This type of action continued throughout the first half. Fleming-Neon threatened to score two times during the first half, but fumbles defeated their purpose.

The second half remained mostly the same, but the last two minutes of the game provided enough excitement for a lifetime.

Elkhorn started a drive from the 40-yard line and with two screen passes and two good runs was on the 15-yard line. Then out of nowhere came a pass and Elkhorn scored. The extra point was not made.

The Pirates tried desperately to score but time ran out.

Weather has handicapped the Pirates this year, whereas last year the rain was their best friend!
